Veterans Denied National Guard arm Escert on Memorial Day.

Brig.-Gen. Fitzgerald Says His Men Have Been Hard Worked.

Plans for the annual parade and exerwho fought for the preservation of the Union, are rapidly crystalllizing in the hands of Grand Marshal George M. Barry, of the Memorial Day demonstration, and his Chief of Staff, Adjt.-Gen. Max Reece, is buried in a mass of correspondence at the Grand Marshal's headquarters in the Spingler House.
The Adjutant-General of the to this Memorial Day demonstration, and that came to Chairman David S. Brown, of the Memorial Committee of the G. A. R., in hie form of a declination from Gen. Louis Fluzgerald, in command yesterday. of the First Brigade, National Guard, to act as escort to the Grand Army of the Republic. His letter is as follows:

Dear Sir. A reply to your essented favor of April 12, heriting 'my command to form part of parading column on the occasion of the observance of the option of the observance of the option of the opti

Personally my respect for the may be which that I purpose making the parace in the tanks of my own Post. Very respectfully yours.

LOUIS FITZUERALD, Brigadier-General.

The veterans are much disappointed at this turn of affairs though, the true soldiers, they do not criticise. The militia have formed the escort to the veterans on Memorial Day for fourteen years, the Fourth of July parade of the National Guard being abandoned to give place to the even more logical demonstration in honor of the nation's demonstration in nonor of the defenders.

A number of the veterans were found in the headquarters in the basement of the City Hail by an "Evening World reporter, and every min of them expressed regret that they were not to have the National Guard in line with them. "We are not growing in numbers the way the gray hairs on our heads are, as the years go by," said one of these lilinois Man Appointed First Assist-as the years go by," said one of these old warriors.

"Our battles are fought and done with, and we like to look upon the young Americans in the National Guard as the fellows who have taken our places. I don't suppose they realize it, but we're darned proud of them!

"Fathers always have a pardonable pride in their sons, though nobody ever hard of a son who was much more than lenient to the father. I suppose it's so with the guardsmen. Til bet my bottom dollar, though that some of the militia regiments will turn out whether Gen. Fitzgeraid issues a general order to the brighde or not." brigade or not."
Secretary Atkinson, behind his desk in the County Clerk's office, took off his rom Col. Cavanagh and the Sixty-minth Regiment—the Irish boys were our execut time out of mind, before the brigade began to turn out with us.

"I expect favorable replies from some of the others; from all of them, I sincerely hope, for the old men like to have the boys with them on that day of all the days of the year."

An officer of the Seventh Regiment was outspoken. He said:

"Of course, I perfectly appreciate Gen. Fitzgerald's position. His order would compel the appear ance of the whole command, and, feeling that the boys have had, are having, and will have, an immense amount of work this year, he hates to put on any more. But I believe that If the question were put to a compel the appear ance of the whole command, and, teeling that the boys have had, are having, and will have, an immense amount of work this year, he hates to put on any more. But I believe that if the question were put to a vote in the Seventh, the boys would be found to be almost unanimous for turning out. For when is there a more appropriate hour for their turning out. They should turn out for patriotism, for their love and respect for the soldiers of '61 and '64.

"What will the people say if the 'toy soldiers' of 183 are too tired and over-worked to turn out and do honor to the brave men who marched through the swamps of the South and fought, and suffered every deprivation, with disease and death all about them, that we of to-day might have a country to love?

"Why wouldn't it be a good idea for the commanders of the National Guard organizations to call their men together and get a vote on it? I believe that they'd reduest Gen. Fitzgeraid to issue a general order for Memorial Day, by a large majority."

Gen. Fitzgerald, in a chat with a representative of "The Evening World," pointed out that the resulations gave him authority to appoint such drills and exercises during the year as he deemed necessary for the good of the service; that from time immenorial this regulation had been construed to mean two parades in the year. One parade was held during the recent fostivities.

"I had intended," said Gen. Fitzgerald, "to hold a general field day, and had arrange for May 20 for that purpose, but there was much expression among the men of the feeling that they were having too much, and I imally gave it up, for you know that, beginning this week and during the next wo weeks, the several regiments must engage, only the Sixty-minth and the Ninth being excepted. Another not inconsiderable objection is the expense. The regiments must pay out about $500 or $600 each for muste, horses and the like for every parade.

"I should be very giad indeed to have the brigade power to do that, and I think that would remove one of th

The men are very quick to obey.

There was not a growl, and 99 per cent. of my men reported for duty when they were needed for the Burfale troubles dist year, either at Burfale or se, their armories ready to go to Burfale. That was when they were needed for real duty, but the present is a different occusion. Among chizens the feeling is unanimous that it would be a most remarkable thing if the guardsmen did not turn out on Memorial Day to do honor to the memory of the old soldiers under the sod and to sustain the bent and gray survivors of the war for the Union.

WARSAW, Ind., May 10.—The village of North Alveston, ten miles northwest of this city, was almost totally descroyed by fire yesterday.

The residence of J. J. Jackson was among those consumed, and the entire family, consisting of himself, when, two sons and a daughter perished in the flames. Several other persons were basily burned.

Many ramilies made their escape clad only in their right-clothes.

The village has no pre-extinguishing apparatus, and being off the line of a railroad, it was impossible to get a message to this city in time to secure aid. The loss is estimated at $75,000.

The third point was that Judge Martine, in ordering the arrest of one of Hayes's witnesses, limel J. Noan, when he left the stand or an implied charge that Noan had offened against the law, prejudiced the case of hayes before the jury.

Sixteen other reasons were offered. Gen. Sapier in reply cited many authori-ties against the first two points and pointed out that the civil action was keptalive by the very perjury for which Hayes was tried. The Court reserved decision.
